Create digital media in Seneca's Sandbox

Published 8/2/2023 by Katherine Apostolou

Do you have a project or presentation due soon and want to make a lasting impression with digital media? Or perhaps you'd like to develop your social media brand, record some music or a podcast, host a photoshoot or simply tinker with some cool technology. The Sandbox are digital media studios hosted by Seneca libraries that are open to all students, staff and faculty, free of charge. The Sandbox is equipped with 3D printers, studio space for creating content and an assortment of technology.

You don't need to be a digital media expert to use the Sandbox. There will be someone on hand to help set up the equipment and studio for your project. You can work on personal projects as well as academic projects in the Sandbox. The Sandbox also offers online learning opportunities for anyone in the Seneca community who wants to learn how to create digital media. This includes self-directed learning modules and synchronous online learning support.

Book an appointment today and get your creative juices flowing!

For more information, check out the Sandbox or email sandbox@senecacollege.ca.

tags : student-news