

International students applying for a PGWP: Prepare for your English test at Seneca

Published yesterday by Ryan Flanagan

If you are graduating international student, you may be thinking about applying for a Post-Graduation Work Permit (PGWP).

As part of your application, you will need to demonstrate English language proficiency by taking an English or French language test that is accepted by the Government of Canada. Your test options include the International English Language Testing System (IELTS) test, now being offered at Seneca Polytechnic's Newnham Campus.

Workshops now being offered to prepare you for the IELTS test

To help you get ready, Seneca is hosting a hybrid IELTS Preparation workshop from May 1 to 13.

The workshop includes 18 hours of learning (12 hours of in-person learning and six hours of asynchronous learning) and costs $250.

Expert instructors will provide you with helpful feedback to build your confidence in test-taking skills and help you reach your desired band score.

Reserve your spot and register online.

For more information on PGWP eligibility, please refer to the Seneca International webpage.

tags : student-news