

Course Delivery

Version 3

Published 11/18/2021 by Gerald Encabo Last updated 2/22/2022 7:35 PM by Gerald Encabo

In-person

Programs or courses are fully in person and require students to come to campus.

Program Delivery at Seneca: In-Person Learning

Online

Students learn remotely and are not required to come to campus. Online learning can be synchronous – scheduled online class time with professors – or asynchronous – no scheduled class time and learning is independent.

Program Delivery at Seneca: Online Learning

Hybrid

Some parts of the program or course are online and other parts are in person. Students will need to come to campus for part of their program or course.

Program Delivery at Seneca: Hybrid Learning

Flexible

Using innovative learning spaces, professors teach a class to students in a classroom or lab and broadcast to students online at the same time. In courses delivered in the flexible format, students have a choice of coming to campus for an on-campus experience or learning remotely online. Programs that indicate flexible delivery will include at least one course in this format.

Program Delivery at Seneca: Flexible Learning

tags : course-delivery