

Former Nylon helps Seneca students find their voice

Published 11/3/2021 by Stephanie Conte

Micah Barnes shook his head “no” when asked if his students at Seneca know about The Nylons, the platinum-record-selling a cappella group he was a member of in the early 1990s.

“Their parents do,” said the Canadian jazz crooner and vocal coach, who teaches in the Independent Songwriting & Performance certificate program.

And that’s just fine with him because “I want to give my students the spotlight.”
