Visiting researcher from U.K. contributes to trafficking project at Seneca

Published 3/17/2022 by Tiffany Hsieh

Before Paige Keningale had ever set foot in Canada, the PhD candidate at the University of Surrey in England had already heard of Seneca's Honours Bachelor of Crime & Intelligence Analysis (BCIA) degree program — the first such degree offered at an Ontario postsecondary institution.

So, when her university gave her a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity through the British government's Turing Scheme to study and work abroad, Ms. Keningale knew exactly where she wanted to go.
