Seneca is home to a pool of talent that's highly skilled and ready to work. This includes more than 30,000 full-time and 60,000 part-time students in over 300 academic programs. Graduates from Seneca are career ready and possess both professional skills and theoretical knowledge for the workplace. Seneca Works is a resource dedicated to helping students apply for intern positions for their work-integrated learning term or for post-graduation entry level positions. The workshops provided for students help with resume building and restructuring, interview skills and preparation, effective job search strategies, LinkedIn networking, cover letter writing, resume writing, career readiness, and development to advance your career pathway.
