The eagle teaches us to love and commit to one another. They also teach us about parenthood and about the love we show to our children. We look to Eagle when we want to understand how to be of sound guidance to one another.

Hawk teaches us to act and to trust our instincts. Like Eagle and all high-flying birds, they see all things from above. In this way, they also act as guides and as teachers.

Like with Thunderbird, we chose to depict high-flying birds alongside arts and communication programs as a means to visually express how these high-flying birds transform our thoughts and ideas from the physical to the metaphysical.
