Kelly Fyffe-Marshall knows that the road to career success isn't always short or linear.

The Seneca graduate spent nearly a decade working her way up in the world of film and television, trying out different roles and responsibilities before finding what she considers to be her true calling.

"I always say that my life and career goals were a series of very unfortunate events, a lot of 'no's' that led me to the right path," she said. "I know that everything had to happen in the order that it did for me to be where I am now."
